

Cooperative Debate Assignment

This debate format is a modified parliamentary debate. Everyone will be assigned a dyad (or partner). Together you will debate against another dyad. The topics can be local, national or a world policy issue. Each of you will be responsible for presenting the strongest arguments, reasons, and evidence for your position and rebutting arguments set forth by your opponents.

Prior to the debate:

- Each student will write and submit two policy propositions. (refer to guidelines for writing a proposition hand out)
- Students will be placed in their debate teams and given three to four possible propositions to choose from. Students will do some preliminary research and come to class prepared to discuss which proposition they would prefer to debate. As a team you will discuss and make the final decision on which proposition they will debate.
- Each person will turn in an INDIVIDUAL cooperative debate brief with claims. Each person should have both affirmative and negative briefs (Students will NOT know which side they are debating until the day of the debate) (APA citation and key information found from each source)

You must have a minimum of 2 claims for the Affirmative and 2 claims for the Negative.

Each claim must have 2 sources = 4 sources for Affirmative, and 4 sources for Negative

Refer to example on the webpage for format

All cooperative debate briefs with claims and sources in APA format MUST be turned in on the first day of debates (this is the first day of all cooperative debates in our class).

The day of the debate:

- As a group you will briefly present and define key terms, and existing laws for your topic. Each student is required to participate in the group presentation.
- The instructor will then open an envelope and announce which side (affirmative or negative) each dyad will be debating.
- With your debate partner (dyad) you will decide who will debate first, and who will rebut first. Each person must present a constructive and a rebuttal.
- Audience members will flow the arguments and vote on who they felt won the debate.

Debate format:

- I. Statement of the Resolution

- II. Brief presentation by the group of key terms, important commonplaces and present laws status quo.

- III. The announcement of which side each dyad must represent.

- IV. Cooperative Debate
 - A. First Affirmative (Must include plan) (4 minutes)
 - B. Negative Rebuttal (2 minutes)

 - C. First Negative (4 minutes)
 - D. Affirmative Rebuttal (2 minutes)

 - E. Second Affirmative (4 minutes)
 - F. Negative Rebuttal (2 minutes)

 - G. Second Negative (4 minutes)
 - H. Affirmative Rebuttal (2 minutes)

 - I. Negative Final Statement (dyads choice) (1 minute)
 - J. Affirmative Final Statement (dyads choice) (1 minute)

Graded Criteria:

- Plan – Aff team: was it well thought out, was it consistently presented by both partners. Neg team: did you poke holes in the plan?
- Constructive arguments – Are they well researched? Do they relate to the proposition? Did you verbally cite your research in the arguments and establish credibility for your sources? Were you prepared? Did you read or deliver your arguments? Were your arguments logical? Affirm - Did you state an advantage to your plan? Negate – Did you state a disadvantage to their plan?
- Rebuttals – Did you critically listen to and attack your opponents' arguments, research, plan, logic, and reasoning?
- Timing – this is very important! Did you utilize your time well? Did you use all of your time? Did you have more information that time?
- Research – Were they from reputable sources? How many did you use? Did you verbally state them and establish their credibility?
- Winning – Did you win the audience vote? Did you win the instructor's vote??
- Group Presentation – Did you work together and clearly define the laws that exist? Did everyone participate? Did you face your audience and deliver the information dynamically? Did you show the audience your competence regarding the topic?
- Dyad interaction – Did you work as a team and help each other out during the debate? Did you support your partner during your time at the podium by protecting their arguments and supporting their sources?
- Individual Cooperative Debate Briefs with Claims – Did you do both (affirmative and negative)? Were the sources in APA style format? Did you have at least two claims for each side? Did each claim have 2 solid sources? (8 sources total) Did the sources have authors, dates and reputable information? Did you select the strongest ones to submit?
